CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, SAN BERNARDINO THE FRIDAY BULLETIN

TAIWAN, CAL STATE TALK RESEARCH, FACULTY EXCHANGES

A blossoming relationship between Cal State and Taiwan may produce mutually beneficial educational and cultural exchanges, among other things, in the years ahead.

Three Taiwanese officials visited the campus in late May to learn more about the university and its expertise. The meeting with Menglin Chang, director of the cultural division, and Yaw-Nan Chen, Ph.D., director of the science division of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs, as well as Samuel F. Liu of the Ministry of Education office for Taiwan, brought together senior administrators, students and faculty to discuss interests and possible partnerships.

The event was a follow up to the mid-April visit of President Anthony Evans and Bill Shum (Physical Planning and Development) in Taiwan, where they toured six universities, spent time with CSUSB alumni and parents of current students, and met with senior government officials. The trip was hosted by Taiwan.

"The Taiwanese universities are among the most progressive that I've seen in all of Asia," President Evans says. "There's a level of energy and intellectual curiosity in Taiwan" that could be matched with interests here, he adds.

During the visit of the Taiwanese officials here, they expressed confidence in the campus's expansion and academic master plan, citing particular interest in teacher education, business and science.

Noting that Taiwan now has 15 percent of its national budget designated for education, Chang says his homeland has emerged from its civil strife with the ability to build an educational infrastructure for the 21st century. Universities will be fashioned with special characteristics, he notes, and develop reputations for academic emphases.

Explaining the role that his office plays in fostering partnerships with American universities, Chang says, "Student and faculty exchanges are the best way to (explore) cultural backgrounds and philosophies." He believes that governments should put more money toward faculty exchanges, above and beyond the Fulbright Fellowships.

With regard to science and technology, Chen says the trend of Chinese students earning their degrees in the U.S. and remaining in this country has reversed. Now, about 20 percent of those earning terminal degrees and nearly 80 percent of master's candidates are returning to Taiwan and becoming productive workers. Reporting total sales nearing $2.3 billion from approximately 140 high-tech firms, Chen says his country is realizing the benefit from science, engineering and research exchanges among universities, too. Taiwanese officials are looking to add to current partnerships they enjoy with UCR, UC Berkeley and other campuses in the state.

LEWIS TO ASSUME BUSINESS SCHOOL DEANSHIP

Professor and chair for the Accounting and Finance Department, Dr. Eldon Lewis, has been appointed as interim dean for the School of Business and Public Administration and will assume the post on July 5.

Lewis, who has been appointed for a two-year period, will take over for current Dean David Porter. Porter recently accepted a position as dean of the School of Management at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks.

Ahead in the next year, says Lewis, is the job of moving into Jack Brown Hall and completing the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) accreditation process. When he was a dean at Wichita State University, Lewis was involved in a similar process, which, coincidentally, also preceded moving into a new building.

The university's business programs have been well established and "we've worked hard to get quality faculty" over the last several years, Lewis says. A major goal now, he believes, is to continue developing these programs, which "must change with changing business conditions."

It was under Porter's leadership that 58 tenure-track faculty were hired, and that approval for constructing Jack Brown Hall was granted.

"We'll miss people in the school and in the Inland Empire," says Porter. He and his wife, Linda, find Fairbanks offers some familiar and inviting qualities.

"I was born in Idaho and grew up with a deep love for sparsely populated, wilderness regions," he said in a memo to business school faculty and staff. "I've been looking for a less populated area and for a Ph.D. granting institution."

Over the next two years, the university will conduct a nationwide search for a permanent replacement for Porter.

A NOTE FROM HUMAN RESOURCES

EMPLOYEE DEVELOPMENT

Over the course of several weeks this summer a number of directors, managers and supervisors will be attending an in-depth, 16-hour management development workshop. The central theme will be the essential tools of management in such areas as leadership, teamwork and communication. During the past several years the budgetary restraint imposed upon our university has created a need to assign and reassign various individuals to significant areas of responsibility within the university. The current developmental activity is an example of how employees at all levels of the university have the opportunity to enhance and expand their skills.

CSUSB has maintained a comprehensive program of training and development since 1985. The Human Resources Department is pleased to assist employees in their professional growth. Avenues of enhancement are continually available through the fee waiver program, regular on-campus training offerings and specialized off-campus participation at workshops, institutes and seminars conducted by professional organizations, associations and other educational institutions.

STAFF AWARD NOMINATIONS

All employees are encouraged to nominate individuals for the 1992/93 annual Staff Employee Award Program. Two employees will be selected as recipients for the Outstanding Employee Award and two others for Performance Excellence recognition.

The nomination period ends on June 30. Those employees selected for recognition in each category will be honored by the university in the fall at the annual university convocation.

CAL STATE GOLFER NABS NATIONAL HONOR

Cal State golfer, Greg Wilson, has been selected by the Golf Coaches Association of America as a 1992-93 All-American Golf Scholar.

This award is given annually to five collegiate golfers who demonstrate excellence both in the classroom and on the golf course. While holding down a 3.63 grade-point average in the classroom, Wilson, a junior accounting major, maintained a stroke average of 74.3 during the 1992-93 golf season.

Wilson will receive a $1,000 scholarship from the Golf Coaches Association of America.

DANIELS AWARD GOES TO BASKETBALL STANDOUT

San Bernardino businessman, Lawrence Daniels, an alumnus of Cal State, is being honored with the creation of a CSUSB women's basketball award in his name.

The first Lawrence L. Daniels Award was recently given to Cal State guard Shandell Steen, who, in her two years with the Coyotes, has been noted for her outstanding defensive efforts. Averaging one rebound for every five minutes played, Steen has started in eight of her 28 games.

Augmenting traditional players' honors such as the MVP and Coach's award, the Lawrence L. Daniels Award has been established to highlight significant contributions made by an individual player.

"Shandell Steen will definitely be someone to look out for on next year's team," says Coach Luvina Beckley (Athletics). "As her time on the floor increases, she will definitely have the stats and potential to be one of the most productive athletes at Cal State."

A long-time supporter of the university, Daniels notes that he is "the first person of color to be elected president of the Alumni Association and to serve on the Foundation Board" at Cal State. He is the benefactor of an academic scholarship for African-American students and a women's basketball scholarship at the university.

A professional counselor and educational consultant, Daniels has many honors to his credit, including CSUSB Alumnus of the Year, Distinguished Alumni Service Award, the Citizen of Achievement Award from the League of Women Voters, the Presidential Award of the National Council of Negro Women, and a certificate of appreciation for his contribution to the Air Force Equal Opportunity Program Department.

Daniels earned his bachelor's degree in social science and master's degree in educational counseling at Cal State.
